PITTSBURG WINS ANOTHER

A Time When the Home Club Had a Lead and Should Have Been Victorious.

New York Defeats Philadelphia in a Fine Game-Chicago Beaten by the Champions -Bostons Win from Washington.

The Pittsburgs won easily from Indianapolis yesterday, outfielding, outbatting, outrunning and outgeneraling them. The home players did about everything that was not expected of them. No one expected them to earn four runs off Galvin, one of the best pitchers in the League; they are not paid salaries with the expectation that they will do such things. But they were expected to hold the visitors down to a close score, for they had in their best battery, and the Pittsburgs are not as strong batters as the majority of the League teams. The Hoosier club, however, in its characteristic manner, turned around and did all the things that were not expected of it. A strange record these men make. A few days ago Boyle faced the Chicagos and held them down to one run. At the same time the home club, although facing a pitcher far inferior to Galvin, could not even bat one run out of him. Yesterday the home elub surprised everybody by earning two runs off the veteran in the very first inning, which was enough to make victory almost a certainty; but Boyle, whom the Chicago singgers could not touch when it would have done no injury had they batted him for a hundred rune, was knocked all over the field by the Pittsburgs, of ordinary batting talent. It is no wonder the home patrons become disgusted at such an exhibition. Why does not the local team take advantage of opportunities as other It seems that a good chance win makes defeat a certainty. Four out of five of its victories this year have been achieved when its friends had no expectation of its winning, and would not have been disappointed to see it lose. It is discouraging, however, for it to lose game after game which it clearly ought to win. Notwithstanding the manner in which Boyle was batted the visitors would not have won the game but for fielding errors, as the visitors were not lucky in bunching their hits. Glasscock, Denny and Burdick contributed errors which were vital. Burdick took the place of Hines, who sprained his ankle in sliding into the plate. The team, however, was demoralized somewhat in the field by the absence of Bassett. The Indianapolis club is clinging to one very bad custom which has been discarded by nearly every other club-that is, sending the visitors to the field at the outset of the game. In a very close game it is a decided advantage to have the last time-at bat, especially so in the case of a club as nervous as is the local one in a critical place. In yesterday's game it started out on Galvin in a way that must have fairly taken his breath away. Hines and Denny made singles and Seery a beautiful twobagger to the fence, which sent both the preceding batsmen home. The next three batters were retired, leaving the locals with a lead of two runs. The Pittsburgs got down to work and tied the score in the first two innings. After two outs in the first, Smith hit for a base and stole second. He came home on Beckley's drive over Hines's head for three bases. The ball would have been good for two home runs on many grounds. In the second inming Maul reached first base on an error by Denny. He started for second, but would have been put out easily by Glasscock had not the latter dropped Myers's throw. Glasscock then let Galvin's grounder get away from him, and Maul scored while the twelve bundred spectators fairly gnashed their teeth. The visitors then eased up until the local team made some more runs, which occurred in the Boyle, the first batter made a single, and Hines sent him in with a two-bagger. He himself reached third on Denny's fly to center, and then did one of the most daring bits of base-running that he ever did in his life. Seery sent a difficult fly to Smith, and Hines came home after the ball was eaught. Smith stood paralyzed for a moment as he saw the center fielder running in, but then threw the ball fines made a hard slide and got home in safety, but sprained his leg so that he had to retire in the next incing. The Smoky Cities went in in the last half of the inning and tied the score with as much ease as if they bad been playing against amateurs. Galvin made a hit past first, which Shoeneck should have made a greater effort to get. Miller drove a beautiful hit into right field, but McGeachy, the star player of the home team when it comes to a critical stage, threw the ball on a line to third base, and Galvin was out. It was one of the best plays of the year, but it was wasted on the desert air. Coleman made a pretty single into right, sending bome Miller, who had reached second on the play by which Galvin had been thrown out at third. A passed ball and wild pitch put Coleman on third, and he trotted home on Beckley's base hit down the left foul line. In the seventh inning the Pittsburgs settled the contest. Beckley, after two outs, made auother hit down the foul line. He got a big start in stealing to second, and Myers threw about ten feet over Denny's head. Burdick ran in, presumably with the intention of stopping the ball, but he didn't do it, and Beckley walked got it, touched McGeachy and made a double play, ending the game. McGeachy made a mistake in not stopping when he saw that Smith had the ball. He declares, however, that the fielder did not touch him. Score: INDIANAPOLIS. NEW YORK, Sept. 4.-New York downed Philadelphia to-day after a hard struggle. Both Titcomb and Buffinton pitched superbly, though Buffinton received the better support. Murphy's back-stop work and throwing to second and Whitney's work in the fifth inning were the features of New York's fielding. Irwin's catch of Ward's red-hot liner, Delehanty's catch of Connor's drive to the left-field ropes, with two men on bases, and Farrar's catch of a long foul fly were the features of the visitors' game.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—Thirteen naen left on l tells the story of Chicago's defeat by Detroit today. At critical moments, when a hit would have resulted in two or three runs, Convay held his nerve and only feeble files were knocked. He pitched a strong game, and, although wild at times, his support was very bad. WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 .- The case of pitcher Widner again came up in the Supreme Court of the District to-day, on a motion by counsel for the New Orleans Base-ball Club, that the bond filed by the club be approved, and that the temporary injunction heretofore granted, conditioned upon the filing of a bond indemnifying the Washington club in case the suit should be decided in its favor on trial hearing, be put into effect. Counsel for the Washington club objected to the bond, on the ground that there was no proof that the acting-president of the New Orleans club, who signed the bond, had authority to do so, or to attach the corporate seal of the club to the papers. Justice Cox, however, overruled the objection and approved the bond, and the temporary injunction now takes effect. There seems to be a question as to whether this injunction restrains Widner from playing anywhere except in this city, though the weight of opinion is to the effect that he cannot lawfully pitch for the Washingtons, either here or else-

TRYING YOUNG BLOOD.

The Races of the Trotting and Pacing-Breeders' Association at the Fair Grounds.

A fair crowd assembled at the fair grounds yesterday afternoon to witness the first day's exhibition of racing in the annual meet of the Indiana Trotting and Pacing Horse-breeding Association. Although the movement is as yet in its infancy, the attendance yesterday was much better than was expected by the most sanguine. Considerable interest was manifested in the trial of the track; which has been pronounced by experienced horsemen as being one of the finest in the country, and shortly after the races were begun it was evident that the expectations of the crowd were not vainly founded. The programme of the day consisted of trotting by the foals of 1887, pacing of foals of 1885 and trotting stallions, and it was rigidly adhered to. The first race, in which were entered the trotting foals of 1887, was a flush one, there being eight entries, as follows: Minatorin, sired by Hambrino and from the dam Auditor; Boone Wilson, by Jim Wilson and the dam by Daniel Boone, entered by E. L. Clancey, of Edinburg; Norteh, by Richwood; Kate Creighton, the first daughter of Jersey Wilkes, entered from the Warren Park farm, of Fort Wayne; John Debolles, sired by Roger Hauson; Egyptian, by Charm; Mignen, by New Jersey Volunteer, and Spray, by Princeton. All of these colts were in good condition, and, with but one or two exceptions, their records were well established in the West, although they were made on new and untried ground. W. P. Ijams, of Terre Haute, Frank Walker and John Browning served in the capacity of judges. Some difficulty was experienced in getting an even start, and after the first successful dash it was difficult to conjecture. for the first half heat the comparative strength of the respective horses. The record by heats was as follows: Minatorin 1 2 2 John Debolles 5 8 Boon Wilson..... 2 1 1 Egyptian...... 6 3 4 Norich...... 3 4 6 Mignoni...... 7 7 3

Kate Creighton 4 5 5 Spray 8 6 7 Boone Wilson took the lead in the second heat and maintained his gait, winning on a score of 1:382,1:36 and 1:331. Minatorin easily came in second, passing the wire a few feet in the rear of her leader.

The pacing foals of 1885 were the next class called upon the track. Temple H., a three-year-old, owned by Cope & Hunt, of Brownsburg, was the only starter, and walked over the track. The pacing stallions of 1884 followed Temple H. on the track, there being three entries, as follows: Beaumont, owned by Samp Wilson, of Rushville; Royal Mont, owned by L. W. Cobb, of Aurors, and Billy Worthington, owned by J B. Fairley, of Rushville. This race was easily won by Royal Mont, who crossed the wire away ahead of her followers, both of which broke badly in each heat. Beaumont in the second heat broke just as the wire was reached, and lost the heat. The following were the heats:

Royal Mont...... 1 1 1 | Billy Worthington.. 2 3 2 Beaumont...... 3 2 3 | Royal Mont scored in 2:39 1g; 2:37, and 2:39 14. Taking everything into consideration, yesterday's meeting was a most sucessful one. The owners of the various horses were on the grounds, in addition to a large gathering of prominent horsemen from this and neighboring States. It is only of recent date that Indiana's superiority has become known as a horse-breeding State, and from this fact the present association has developed. To-day's races will be entered in by trotting foals of 1886, pacing foals of 1887 and pacing stallions.

THE SOUTH'S BLOODY SHIRT

Senator Reagan Drops About Twentyfive Years Behind The Present Time.

And Defends Slavery, Secession and the Late Confederacy-Testimonial to the Great Superiority of the American Fool.

A DEFENSE OF TREASON.

Senator Reagan Speaks in Behalf of the Confederacy and Secession. Special to the Indianapolis Journal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—It was a spectacle that all patriotic and loyal citizens will regret which Senator Reagan, of Texas, presented in the Senate this afternoon. Mr. Reagan is the most prominent confederate living, with the exception of Jeff Davis. He was Secretary of the Treasury and Postmaster-general in the Confederate Cabinet, and for years was Jeff Davis's bosom friend and constant companion. It will be remembered that he was with Jeff Davis at the evacuation of Richmond, and about the time of the latter's capture at the close of the war. Mr. Reagan to-day undertook a defense of the Confederacy and slavery. He held both of them as God-given rights. He declared that slavery was entailed upon the South, and that it was an inheritance of the Southern people; that the South only fought to retain its property and exercise privileges and rights given it under the Constitution of the United States. He said the South preferred to die battling for its rights rather than live and permit the North to intermeddle with its rights and privileges. He declared that if slavery was a sin and unlawful that it was the fault of George Washington, Jefferson, and other patriots who crystallized American institutions, fought for liberty, framed the Constitution, and started the country in the path it has since followed. He named a half-dozen Presidents who had owned slaves, and added that if it was sinful aud unlawful to maintain slavery, the South was the victim of slavery. He held that the way to have abolished slavery was for the federal government to have purchased the slaves and freed them. Mr. Reagan became very excited, very earnest, and undoubtedly used the same argument that he employed when he appealed to the South thirty years ago to take up arms and strike down the federal Union. Senator Blair, of New Hampshire, in about ten minutes, destroyed all of the argument advanced by the Senator from Texas in over one hour's talk. Mr. Blair said that if the South had been a victim of slavery it was a very willing and anxious victim; that he remembered when the South was demanding as its constitutional right that it should take its own slaves into every State and Territory in the Union; that it should go into the North and West, and institute slavery as well as in the South. The gentleman from Texas was mistaken when he said the South was fighting for the preservation and not the propagation of slavery, as the propagation of slavery was the very thing the South was demanding when it became necessary for the federal government to interfere, and the memorable scenes of bloodshed took place in Kansas in 1854 and 1855. He reminded the Senator from Texas that on quite a number of occasions sectional lines had been drawn in the Senate and the House, and that in not a single instance bad a Republican instigated sectional debate; that the Senator from Texas was himself guilty of having precipitated sectional controversies by grossly insulting the North. He added that it was the Texan's wont to deliver insulting harangues in the Senate against the North and precipitate sectional controversies. Mr. Reagan sprang to his feet and denied that he had ever insulted the North. He said he had probably insulted the Republican party, but that the Republican party was not the North. Mr. Blair very firmly declared that the Republican party was the North, if indeed any section of the country could be likened unto a party or a party could be called any section of the country. He said it was the North that had organized the Republican party which had broken the shackles from slavery and driven the South fairly eloquent at times, and the galleries applanded heartily. The scene was a memorable one and the impression was profound. Mr. Reagan's is the only really open and determined defense of slavery, the Confederacy and secession that has been made in Congress for several years, and it demonstrates the fact that the Confederacy is to-day as much alive, active and determined as it ever was.

A Correspondent Claims Vast Superiority for the Fool of the American Variety.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 .- Following is an extract from a letter received from a prominent business man whose name Senator Cullom does not feel at liberty to publish, as the letter is a private one, but whose business gives the writer a thorough familiarity with the subject in hand:

"Dear Sir-Noting the provisions of the socalled retaliatory bill, now reported to the House of Representatives, and that the President is to have authority to cause Canadian vessels to pay 20 cents per ton for navigating our canals at Lake St.-Clair and the Soo, I wonchannel by which all our lake commerce passes through the Detroit river at and near Amherstburg is Canadian water! We have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to improve the British channel and neglected our own. Now comes the tug of retaliation, and Canada may sink this costly channel full of stone-laden barges and stop all navigation of the Detroit river to vessels loaded deeper than nine or ten feet of water. Senator, there is no fool like the American fool."

HOW TO BE NATURALIZED. Conditions on Which Foreign-Born Persons May Become Citizens.

Foreign-born persons who desire to become naturalized will find this digest of the naturalization laws a convenient form of reference: Each person desiring to become naturalized must swear that he will support the Constitution of the United States and renounce and relinquish any title or order of nobility to which he now is or hereafter may be entitled, and must absolutely and entirely ronounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state or sovereignty whatever, and particularly to the government of the country of which he was before a subject. He must also have the following qualifications:

He must have resided within the jurisdiction of the United States for at least five years. He must have declared his intentions (first papers) to become a citizen at least two years previous to his application for naturalization

He must have resided in the State for at least Upon application in court to become a citizen he must produce a qualified elector to prove the foregoing qualifications. He must be naturalized at least one month be-Persons of foreign birth arriving in the United States, when under the age of eighteen, need not declare intentions (first papers), but can become citizens without such papers after being of age and residents of the United States for at least five years, and of the State one year. The fact to be proved by a qualified Naturalized citizens to become qualified electors must comply the same as native-born electors as to residence and taxes. The foreign-born son of a naturalized citizen can vote on his father's papers, where the father was naturalized before the son became of age; but if the son has arrived at the age of twenty-one before the father was naturalized, then the son must become a citizen in the same manner as other foreign-born persons. Every male citizen twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections: 1. He shall have been a citizen of the United States one month. 2. He shall have resided in the State one year, or, if having previously been a qualified elector or native-born citizen thereof, and shall have removed therefrom and returned, then he shall have resided therein six months immediately preceding the election. 3. He shall have resided in the district where he intends to vote two months immediately preceding the election, instead of ten days, as heretofore. Connecticut All Right.

Secretary of State Hubbard. "I think there is little doubt that the Republicans will carry Connecticut next time. It will take the change of only one vote in a thousand, to give us the State, and we will change at least five in every school district. Why, on one little stream there we have $10,000,000 worth of manufacturing establishments, and don't you suppose that will help us on to success? We are making our fight purely on protection. We don't care anything for the fisheries, for the reason that everybody knows how the Republicans stand on that issue. The Democrats have been trying to shift the issue, but we will not have it. We want to fight the issue on tariff, and that is the way to victory. There is more manufacturing to the square foot in Connecticut than in any other State in the Union. I am just as sure as I am living that we will be successful at the coming election. I have been from one end of the State to the other, and I find 'floppers' by the thousands. Not only that, but I have been through New York State, and I find the sentiment the same there. Everybody is for protection, and I think there is little danger from New York. The only thing that puts one guessing, is whether the Republicans have catered too much to the Prohibitioniets in the State. To sum up the entire situation I think About Indiana.

Harrison is a sure Winn

San Francisco Chronicle.

One of the battle-grounds of the present cam-paign is sure to be Indiana. It is what is called a doubtful State, which, we are inclined to believe, only means that the Republican majority may be somewhat smaller than in other States, say Massachusetts or California; but it is so far doubtful that the Democrats are trying to claim does possess peculiar curative powers.

it. For this purpose they are relying very largely on the farmer vote, assuming that Indiana is peculiarly an agricultural State, and that they can make the farmer believe he is taxridden to death by the tariff.

One idea is about as nearly correct as the other. Indiana is a great agricultural State. but it is a great manufacturing State, as well, for the people of Indiana learned a long time ago the lesson which Jefferson sought to teach. that agriculture and manufactures must flourish side by side in order to insure prosperity to a country or a community. There is just about as much reason to expect hostility between the farmers of Indiana and her manufacturers as there would be to expect one of a man's legs to go east and the other west. P. E. Studebaker, the great South Bend wagon-maker, who knows the farmers of Indiana as well as her manufacturers, cannot see any evidences of the irrepressible conflict on which the Democratic hopes of carrying Indiana are built. He makes wagons and sells them to the farmers, and he should know the situation of affairs in Indiana, and he says that Harrison and Morton will carry the State by a good majority. He does not think that because he, the farmer customers are bound to vote the opposite way, and, as he is in a position to know, we will set Indiana down as safe for the Republican ticket.

A Democratic Opinion.

Washington Post "Are we going to carry Indiana? Well, we think we are." The reply came from Representative John H. O'Neall, a Hoosier of the Hoosiers and a Democrat from his boots to his spectacles. "Of course, we've got to work; we always have to work in Indiana. Howard and Matson have already left the House and are now in the heat of the campaign. Bynum, too, has gone home to help move the cause along." "What makes Indiana so uncertain?" asked

"The floating vote, my friend, the floating vote, or as we term it, the manageable vote. It. always has existed in our State and I suppose always will, so long as there is a large and easily accessible campaign fund. If we can secure forty per cent. of that floating vote we carry the State; if we don't, then indeed is our cause gone up Salt river for a somewhat lengthy cruise. Do I suppose the President's $10,000 will capture a few of the floaters? Prebably, but we need more cash than that." "Will there be any $10,000 contributions made in Indiana this fall?" "I fear not. We have but one man in the State and in politics who could give that amount without feeling it seriously, and he, unfortunately, is not given to such extensive liberality-I mean the gentleman who ran with Gen. Hancock in '80."

Sheridan's Grave in Arlington. Washington Letter in Philadelphia Times.

In their evening drives those who take in the shaded solitudes of Arlington observe a change in the appearance of the grave of Sheridan, although it was Mrs. Sheridan's wish that the treasured relics of mortality of her husband should be laid in their mother earth in the simple grave of a soldier. Since the martial ceremony and manner of burial were compassed in accordance with her wishes, a few weeks ago, the military authorities of the grounds have added some improvements of their own. Without opening the grave they have dug around the casket and have enveloped it in a casing of brick and cement. On the top they have sunk in the earth an immense stone of cubic form weighing about three tons, which originally was the base of a column of the old War Department. The sacred spot of Sheridan's final rest is now marked by the appearance of the dressed surface of this immense bowlder about one inch above the fresh green of the surrounding turf. It bears no inscription, but wreaths of immortelles mark it to the gay drivers-by that it is a grave. Until a suitable monument rears its inscribed form of granite or bronze the stranger must be told that there rest on that peaceful hillside the ashes of the hero of Winchester and Five Forks. The Town Crier's New Task. London Truth.

To advertise for a wife by means of the town crier is decidedly a novel idea, and I regret to see that the magistrates of Millport, New Brunswick, have censured their crier for making himself the mouthpiece of a would-be benedict. The crier, it seemed, had been perambulating the streets announcing that "a young man of fair means wishes to communicate with a lady of good figure with a view to matrimony. Applications by letter to the White Hart Hotel, Large." The aspirant's wants are so modest, as a good figure is all that he requires, that I have no doubt he is by this time overwhelmed with offers.
